

Barbara E. Bloom, Ph.D., M.S.W

A nationally recognized criminal justice consultant, scholar, and researcher with experience in working with local, state, and national criminal justice agencies, Dr. Bloom specializes in the development and evaluation of programs serving women and girls under criminal justice supervision. She also works in the public policy arena and has served on various legislative commissions. She has directed varied research projects focused on gender-responsive services for women and girls in criminal justice settings.

Dr. Bloom served as project director of the National Institute of Corrections' "Gender-Responsive Strategies: Research, Practice, and Guiding Principles for Women Offenders" report, and received (with Dr.'s Owen and Covington) the University of Cincinnati Award in Corrections for outstanding contribution to the field of corrections in the United States and Canada (2003). She was the co-principal investigator for a project entitled "Modeling Gender-Specific Services in Juvenile Justice: Policy and Program Recommendations." Her publications include Gendered Justice: Addressing Female Offenders and several national studies on incarcerated women and their children.

Dr. Bloom is a professor in the Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice, Sonoma State University, California. She is past president of the Western Society of Criminology. She is also the Co-Director for the Center for Gender and Justice.
